

Alladale Wilderness Reserve announces Alladale Lodge room bookings, hosting of world-class retreats, and an end to commercial stalking.

And offers group accommodation in one the most remote lodges of Scotland

Pieter-Paul Groenhuijsen, Hospitality & Operations Manager A.W.R.

As of March 2018, Alladale Wilderness Reserve has made its distinctive Alladale Lodge available for individual room bookings during low season. Solo travellers, couples, and small groups can now enjoy a fully catered stay in a unique setting on Alladale's 23,000-acre wilderness reserve.

Throughout the year, Alladale will be host to some world-class retreats, such as the Bear Grylls Academy, The Wim 'the iceman' Hof Method, landscape photography, and Yoga & Mindfulness. From a back-to-nature and extreme fitness experience, to a more leisurely and luxurious mastery of photography retreat, Alladale has something to offer to those with a wide variety of interests.

Alladale has ended all commercial stalking and sporting on its reserve, and is focusing on eco-tourism and wildlife watching. All areas of the reserve are now available for those looking to go hiking, cycling, or simply to enjoy the reserve's breathtakingly beautiful rugged mountains, rivers, and glens.

Bunkhouse Deanich Lodge has been made available for those wanting to enjoy a self-catered, off-the-grid experience, deep in the reserve. Located seven miles from Alladale Lodge, making it one of the most remote buildings in Scotland. Staying at Deanich certainly is not for the faint of heart!
